Why study English?
A degree in English from LeTourneau University will give you a great liberal arts foundation that can be applied to a wide field of careers. You could be a teacher, writer, editor, broadcaster, librarian, journalist, lawyer or legal assistant, public relations specialist, linguist, multi-media programmer, and other options we just couldn’t fit in this brochure.

Our courses are designed to build your understanding of the basic tools of language: rhetoric, composition, and grammar. We also want you to develop your love of good literature by introducing you to the writings of significant English, American, and world authors.

Why LeTourneau?
- If you think English majors spend all day with their heads buried in musty old books, think again. We’ve joined the 21st century and taken our studies online. Whether in a classroom or on your own, you can read, write, and publish online. You can even tutor on the Web with our online writing lab, the OwLet.
- Get to know your professors. Small class sizes mean more personal time with your professors.
- Take a trip across the pond with our Oxford Honors Program. Spend a semester or two at the Center for Medieval and Renaissance Studies at Oxford University in England. The program is challenging, and you’ll have the chance to visit places most people have only read about.
- Put your writing talents to work by joining the staff of our yearbook, the Pioneer, or our student newspaper, The YellowJacket. Write and edit stories and take photographs for these publications while you have a great time and earn elective credits.
- Stretch your imagination and broaden your literary knowledge with classes in Shakespeare, C.S. Lewis, and World Literature. Special Topics classes include Christian Classics, J.R.R. Tolkien, Short Stories, and Southern Women Writers. Some of these classes are even offered online during the summer.
- Become a member of Sigma Tau Delta: The International English Honor Society. Our chapter sponsors field trips to dramas, including plays by Shakespeare. Awards and scholarships are available from the chapter’s regional and national offices. Pump up your resumé by publishing your writing in Sigma Tau Delta’s literary journal, The Angle.
- Show off your acting skills by joining Stage Right, our student-led drama group.
- If you enjoy debating, check out the Socratic Club where you’ll study and discuss philosophical issues.
