Dear Marth,

Do faith and work mix? Do churches help bring these two worlds together? Answers from national research are “Yes,” but “Not enough.”

The Center for Faith & Work at LeTourneau University celebrated the launch of its website with the release of two national studies -- of pastors and people in the pew -- that identified attitudes regarding faith in the workplace and difficult challenges facing Christians at work.

We hope you will take advantage of the Center’s resources to help Christians live out their faith at work, and let us know about opportunities for equipping Christians in your community.

LeTourneau Students Hear Business Leaders Talk about Faith at Work

Every month, the Center for Faith & Work brings Christian business leaders to LeTourneau's Longview campus to speak to 1000+ students, faculty and staff. Men and women like David Gowdey, Erin Botsford, Don and Trey Jordan, Ray Nixon, Terry London and Ned Fleming take time to travel to Longview and explain how their faith impacts their work.
On March 21, Tom Leppert, former Dallas mayor and candidate for U.S. Senate, will share his faith story. On April 11, students will hear from Diane Paddison, former COO of two Fortune 500 companies and author of Work, Love, Pray.

Barnhart Crane: The Profit in Profit

Barnhart Crane moves everything from space shuttles to nuclear turbines, and the company is consistently recognized by industry peers for exceptional performance. Alan Barnhart and his brother believe their work matters to God and have built their company on commitments to excellence, innovation and profitability. What's unusual is not Barnhart's success, but what the Barnhart brothers determined to do with the profit generated by their business. Watch the 10-minute video and see for yourself.

LeTourneau University's Center for Faith & Work helps people close the gap between Sunday Religion and Monday Reality.